2. Related Art A photonic crystal fiber (PCF) is a kind of wavelength division multiplexing (WDM) fiber with a refractive index periodically varying along the axis thereof, and can have an excellent intrinsic property such as low loss and polarization dependent loss. Furthermore, since the refractive index is modulated, a mode field diameter in the core is increased, and thus even in a small-core PCF, transmission loss is suppressed. A photonic crystal fiber (PCF) that is presently produced is a silica-based PCF made of pure silica glass.
