
Native Instruments Battery 4.1.6 !LINK!

BATTERY is a powerful drum sampler designed that combines a supercharged library, tailor-made for electronic and hip hop music, with a radically-intuitive workflow that keeps the focus on creativity.

You can instantly find and arrange sounds with a new, tag-based browser and route powerful new effects with drag-and-drop simplicity. Now that Battery 4.1.6 is fully released, I'll try to address the issues I see so far. As with most updates, there's a lot of changes which happen at once. I'll try to get through them all one at a time and address any bugs or issues I find. Please do let me know by commenting and providing info for me to follow up on. As a reminder, you can purchase Battery 4 as the SoundCloud version or from Dontnod through the Sounds 4x SoundCloud store. All of my work on Battery goes directly to Sounds4x with zero crossover between the two services. If your issues remain unresolved, I'd like to hear about them so that I can prioritize them against my future to-do list. Many of the issues I'm seeing are software related. If you're using a combination of Battery 4 and the OS X native version of Snips, please make sure to disable the latter. • Downloaded and restored to the top of the screen can be addressed. Battery 4 will restore to the top if your file/folder navigation is messed up and you use the 3-D controller to move around within your library. This is a UX issue. I'm happy to release a new version that will fix this if it's affecting you. I'm also hoping to address crashes when you use the 3-D controller to move around your library in future. I think I have this one fixed. If you have an issue with the 3-D navigation, please provide feedback in the forums.
